JENGGALA™

Palmyrah tree (lontar) silhouette - Desa Seraya, Karangasem, Bali

The spine of palmyrah leaves (lontar) - Desa Seraya, Karangasem, Bali

Inspired by the traditional Indonesian basket weave, Jenggala is proud to launch the Ingka collection which honors our national heritage. Ingka is a classic handicraft product carefully woven from the spines of the palm-myrah plant (lontar) which are separated from the leaves to make them more flexible and easier to form.

In the past, ingka used a radial weaving pattern which created a round shape like the dinner plate. Over the generations, the craftsmens' creativity produced other shapes including ovals for bowls and trays. Ingka items have a dual function in Indonesian life: for serving food and for religious ceremonies.

The artisanal techniques for making these beautiful objects are disappearing. Today very few people know the old methods. Jenggala is honored to have worked with a family from a small Balinese village of Desa Seraya who produces ingka made from lontar. Such a craftsmanship are rarely found nowadays. Many people in the village who used to be ingka craftsmen now choose to work as silversmiths in a neighboring town.

Inspired by the culture and beauty of ingka, the Jenggala Design Team has designed a tableware collection that celebrates this national treasure.
